FUND MANAGER COMMENTARY AT 30 JUN 2018

We are pleased to see the end of June, which was a very difficult month. Factors including the poor local GDP print, escalating trade wars and expectations of reducing global liquidity conspired to create the perfect storm for South Africa and emerging markets (EMs) in general.

The All Bond Index was down about 1.2% in response to the negative sentiment towards EMs. In addition, South Africa also fell out of favour once again with disappointing GDP data and industrial action at power utility, Eskom.

We are, nevertheless, constructive on EMs at this stage as set out below.

We are also overweight duration in your portfolio. We believe the assets are attractively priced and we think that the EM headwinds are likely to gradually abate.

MARKET COMMENTARY

We remain of the view that EM fundamentals have not shifted materially, with high commodity prices (in particular oil) likely to be supportive of EMs. We also still believe that a stronger US (which we expect for the remainder of 2018) will provide support to EMs.

The tariffs that are being implemented against China on 6 July are still relatively minor and are only likely to shave 0.1% off the growth rates in the US and China. Even with a full-scale escalation of tariffs, which is being touted, the impact will remain manageable, in our view. At the moment, the trade war is the US vs the rest of the world. As long as the rest of the world doesn't descend into fighting amongst themselves then this will be painful, but manageable and will pass.

Bond yields increased during the month and are cheap relative to our fair values. In particular, we found the R186 bonds to be attractive when yields are moving towards 9%. We expect the yield curve to remain steep although, at current prices, we view longer-dated bonds as attractive with some potential for capital gains if we continue to be patient.

This is all consistent with our view that we are unlikely to enter a full blown EMs crisis, while the US is growing at a solid clip and commodity prices are holding up. Therefore, we think that the pessimistic mood that has pervaded the markets is too negative and that sentiment will recover over time. For now, the yield on the assets in question is attractive and we are happy to just sit earning the interest and dividend income.
