FUND MANAGER COMMENTARY AT 31 JAN 2018

We start the new year with the changing of the guard at the ANC which is likely to usher in a new era of prosperity for South Africa (SA). There is an optimism in the air. The rand and bonds have continued to reflect this optimism, with bond yields declining by 0.15% in response to SA's improved fundamentals.

Against this backdrop, the South African Reserve Bank (SARB) is stubbornly refusing to cut interest rates, instead sticking to its policy of smothering the economy to force inflation even lower.

We think that inflation closer to 6% would actually be welcomed by Finance Minister Malusi Gigaba right now as would lower interest rates. Certainly, the extent to which we face tax increases this month is partly as a result of interest rates that are too high and inflation that is too low.

We continue to expect interest rate cuts this year, penciling in the March meeting for the first cut.

MARKET COMMENTARY

It's the dawn of a new era for SA and we eagerly await the start of the Ramaphosa administration. There is hope in the air and the immediate beneficiaries have been an uptick in consumer and corporate confidence. We see this as manifesting in a rise in the SA Reserve Bank's (SARB's) leading indicator and in many economists and regulatory institutions having begun to revise SA's economic growth prospects higher.

We await Minister of Finance Malusi Gigaba's budget speech on 21 February. The extent to which President Jacob Zuma has influenced this will be telling. It is clear to us that the deficit of R50bn could be funded by eliminating corruption alone. Regrettably dealing with this scourge is a multi-year process and taxpayers and bond holders are likely to be asked to fund the deficit whilst corruption is being reigned in. Tax hikes and expenditure cuts are inevitable, and we would also expect the announcement of some sort of programme to curtail corruption. We hope that the Minister understands consumers don't have much capacity for additional taxes, particularly in the context of funding corruption.

We are also pleased to see that some action is finally being taken on Eskom. The utility has an outdated business model and is in severe financial distress. Nevertheless, we think that it still has sufficient financial wiggle room to allow new management about two years to fix the problem before it becomes catastrophic. We are hopeful, although we acknowledge that addressing Eskom's problems is a Herculean task.

We are pleased that SA's Finance Ministry was ranked joint first out of 109 countries (together with New Zealand) as having the world's most transparent budget process, beating Norway and Sweden. We have the skills, we have the infrastructure and the market continues to ascribe hope for positive outcomes to SA. We agree with the market and we are positioned for a good outcome in the country.
