FUND MANAGER COMMENTARY AT 31 JAN 2024

The fund was up 0.9% in January in a solid start to 2024. South African (SA) stocks experienced a tough start to the year (FTSE/JSE Capped SWIX Index -2.9% MoM), following emerging market (EM) peers lower in January. Mining shares were one of the biggest detractors of the JSE's January performance, down 7% in aggregate, dragged lower by weak commodity prices. Fortunately, the fund had limited exposure to this cohort, mitigating some of the potential losses at the start of the year. Despite the generally poor performance of the local bourse, there were a few bright spots, including from luxury goods company Richemont (+10% MoM). Shares in the luxury goods sector had been struggling in the six months leading up to the latest Richemont trading statement, and the strong share price reaction on a marginally better-than-expected trading update is perhaps a sign that sentiment around the sector had become overly negative, while operational momentum has remained robust. There were positive contributions from all of the fund's other asset classes, including the SA-listed property shares, which carried their strong momentum into 2024 (+4% MoM in January), starting the year well after a multi-year period of disappointing returns. The local bonds also eked out a positive contribution thanks largely to the generous yields on offer in the sector. Offshore assets benefitted from a currency tailwind, with the rand down 1.7% MoM against a strong US dollar.
