FUND MANAGER COMMENTARY AT 31 DEC 2024

South African (SA) equity markets suffered a third consecutive monthly decline in December (FTSE/JSE Capped SWIX Index -0.3%), taking a bit of the shine off an otherwise strong year for the local bourse (Capped SWIX +13.5% YoY). Miners (-5% MoM) were the biggest culprit behind the JSE's negative performance in December and the only major JSE segment to deliver a negative return in 2024 (-11% YoY). JSE-listed stocks with earnings geared predominantly to the local economy (SA Inc. shares) had a marginally positive December (+0.25% MoM). Platinum miners fared particularly poorly (-12% MoM/-26% YoY) in the face of weak metal prices. The main reason for the weakness was the so-called Trump Trade (the shift in market sentiment in response to the president-elect's proposed economic policies) and the strong US dollar, which saw the rand weakening. Taking these factors into account, we took profit on our Absa position (Absa was one of the few SA banks which traded higher in November and December), we bought more FirstRand shares on the back of share price weakness, and, finally, we added some gold shares to the portfolio in the form of Harmony Gold. This was on the back of Harmony's share price declining from over R210/share in late October to around the R160/share level in December. The rand weakened substantially in December, and our offshore exposure helped mitigate some of this weakness. Mining shares, where the fund has historically had high exposure, were negative performers for 2024. We look forward to a positive 2025.
