FUND COMMENTARY - FEBRUARY 2026

The Flagship BCI Global Equity Feeder Fund returned 2.6% against a flat return for the MSCI ACWI (both in ZAR) and a -0.2% return for the sector, as returns from global markets started showing some divergence from recent trends.

The biggest contributors for the month were Micron, ACS and Glencore, while the main detractors were Blu Label, Intellia Therapeutics and Heritage Insurance Holdings.

As required by legislation, we confirm that the fund has adhered to its policy objective and strategy.

MARKET COMMENTARY

February delivered a wide variance of results for global equities. In the US, both the S&P500 and Nasdaq declined, dropping 0.8% and 3.3% respectively. In contrast, the small cap Russell 2000 enjoyed a green month, ending 0.8% higher. London's FTSE was strong, gaining 7%, while the Euro Stoxx ended 2.4% higher. Japan's Nikkei had another very strong month, closing 10.4% higher while the Hang Seng Index was relatively weak, closing 2.8% lower.

Economic data released this month painted a mixed picture. Hyperscaler capex numbers continue to expand at an astonishing rate – between Google, Meta, Microsoft and Amazon, capex guidance has now ballooned to roughly $625bn (more than the combined military spending of the UK, France, Germany, Japan, Italy and Canada). This level of spending has investors on edge, as capex discipline and monetization ability becomes paramount.

Despite the strong growth driven by these AI hyperscalers, there were some signs of a cooling US economy, as US GDP expanded at a muted 1.4% in Q4 2025, well below the prior quarter's 4.4% and estimates of 2.8%. The caveat here, is that the government shutdown would have affected this number substantially. US Job openings also unexpectedly fell in in December to about 6.5 million, much lower than the estimate of 7.25 million and the lowest levels since 2020. January layoffs then reached 108 000, the highest January number since 2009. January, however, also saw the addition of 130 000 jobs, the strongest monthly number in more than a year. From the retail side, sales data underwhelmed with contraction across 8 of the 13 categories monitored. To add some confusion, there was also a key finding from the US supreme court, as they struck down Trump's tariffs in a 6-3 decision. This further complicates the outlook over the next couple of months.

February was again dominated by global geopolitical instability, this time in the Middle East. The buildup of US forces proved to be more than posturing, as a series of offensive strikes brought the Islamic regime of Iran to its knees, with a large number of senior leaders, including Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, being killed on the very first day of the conflict. Predictably, this has led to energy futures spiking, with potential knock-on effects for global inflation. The ultimate effect will only be known as the full scale of the operation becomes clear.

The local market continued its winning streak, gaining 7% in ZAR during the month, once again driven by the Resource's index which closed the month 13.4% higher. The Finance Minister delivered one of the strongest budgets in recent years, with steadfast progress on fiscal, monetary and structural reforms - supported by a benign global backdrop and domestic political stability – resulting in improved balance-sheet dynamics: a narrowing deficit; lower debt-service costs; and limited revenue and spending changes.
